TEAM ONLY · DO NOT SHARE

Sales onboarding

Who we are, what we sell, who buys it, and what she'll say before she does. Read this before your first call. Then read the playbook.

Offer: The 90-Day Dating Accelerator
Brand: Nelly Sudri, matchmaker & dating coach

01 · WHO WE ARE

Nelly is the authority. You're on her team.

Nelly Sudri is a matchmaker and dating coach for high-value singles. Her private matchmaking clients are men: successful, high-earning, top of their field. Women follow her for the dating advice and the tough love.

HER CREDIBILITY, IN ORDER OF USEFULNESS ON A CALL

- Years as a matchmaker. She has worked with thousands of successful men, so she knows what they look for and why they pass.
- She has consulted for matchmaking companies and dating apps, and was the face of Blush matchmaking.
- Her coaching clients have paid $10K to $20K and up. Her private matchmaking clients pay far more.
- Forbes 30 Under 30. Seen on Roku's Match Me in Miami.
- She has run this program before. Women who went through it have gotten into relationships, gotten engaged, and gotten married.

AS SEEN IN

BuzzFeed Yahoo The Sun LADbible
Men's Health Refinery29 Business Insider
Daily Mirror

The one idea behind everything we sell

Getting introduced to a great man doesn't fix your dating life. If you can't attract, filter and keep the right man out in the world, an introduction to one of Nelly's clients ends the same way. He's a person with flaws and options, not a cure.

So we fix the woman's process first: how she presents, where she shows up, who she picks, and how she moves a man toward commitment. Nelly's line is that by the time she's done with you, you won't need her matchmaking database.

The whole job on one line

Help her see that something in her process is costing her the man she wants, get her to say she wants it fixed, and make joining easy. If she won't look inward at all, she isn't a fit. Thank her and move on.

The 90-Day Dating Accelerator

A 12-week small-group program for marriage-minded women. The goal is not "husband in 90 days." The goal is to find and fix the leaks in her dating process so she meets better men, gets taken seriously, and stops losing years to the wrong ones.

WHAT SHE GETS	WHAT IT ACTUALLY IS
1:1 dating strategy call with Nelly	About an hour, booked within days of joining. Nelly audits everything end to end: profiles, photos, texts, recent dates, where she meets men, exactly who she wants. Out comes a custom roadmap.
Weekly live group coaching	One call a week on Google Meet with Nelly and the cohort, each week on a theme. Recorded if she misses it.
Direct chat with Nelly	DM support in the community, Monday to Friday, 9 to 5 Pacific. "He sent this, what do I say?" "What do I wear Friday?"
Private community + curriculum	On Skool (web and phone app). Long-form video modules she won't find on Nelly's social: attraction, feminine energy, where to meet men, filtering for commitment, image and styling. Plus a group of other marriage-minded women.
Priority for introductions	If she's doing the work, she moves toward the top of the list when one of Nelly's male clients fits. It's priority, not a promise.

STANDARD PRICE

$5,000

Anchor. It's what she pays if she comes back later.

ON-CALL PRICE

$3,000 total

Only if she enrolls on the call. Paid in full, or split so the total is still $3,000.

NOT SURE YET?

$500

Refundable deposit holds the on-call price for 24 hours.

What she believes, and why it's the sale

Most of them believe they're doing everything right and just haven't been in the right room. That's why they applied for the database. The program only makes sense once she accepts that something in her process is part of the problem. Your call either gets her to say that or it doesn't close.

Never say

- "You'll meet your husband in 90 days." Or any guarantee of a man, a match or a timeline.
- "You deserve it all, you can have everything on that list."
- "You're not getting any younger," unless she said it first. Use her words about time, not yours.
- Your guess at her problem when she hasn't given you evidence. Ask to weigh in instead.

She applied to be matched. She doesn't know there's a program.

This shapes every call. She raised her hand for an introduction to a rich, serious man. Your job is to show her, kindly and honestly, that an introduction isn't what's missing.

1 Nelly posts a call to action

An Instagram story: comment or DM a keyword to be considered for her matchmaking database.

2 She fills out a long application

About 20 questions and 10 to 20 minutes of her time. That's real intent. The last question offers a free dating consultation, and most say yes and book.

3 Setter call (15 minutes)

Inbound consult or outbound dial. The setter runs the first quarter of the sale: what's going on, what she wants, what's in the way, whether she'll own it. She hears the program exists and that the investment runs $1K to $5K. Then the setter books the closing call.

4 Closing call (30 to 45 minutes)

Diagnose, pitch short, take payment on the call. Onboard her before you hang up.

5 Strategy call with Nelly, then the cohort

Nelly delivers. Sales hands off a clean, paid, onboarded client with the strategy call on the calendar.

What the calls taught us so far

The women who bought said their problem out loud and admitted they couldn't fix it alone. Once they did, the close was easy.

The women who didn't said some version of "I'm doing everything right, I just haven't met him." Then we guessed at what she was doing wrong, she disagreed, and the call ended with "let me think about it."

Long calls lose. The no's ran 47 to 76 minutes, mostly pitch. The fastest yes took 36 minutes, with a short pitch and payment taken on the call.

The price has to be said early. When the setter skipped the $1K to $5K range, the closer got "I had no idea it would cost that."

She has built a good life. This is the one thing she can't figure out.

WHO SHE IS

- Late 20s to mid 40s. Most are 30 to 36.
- Has a career and earns her own money: sales director, consultant and investor, therapist, flight attendant, nurse, law student, business owner.
- Busy. Works long hours, travels, tired by the evening.
- Often faith-driven (Christian or Catholic) and family-oriented. Culture matters to many of them.
- Follows Nelly and likes her tough love, at least on social.

WHAT SHE WANTS

- Marriage, and usually kids.
- A man who is established and attractive and ready. She keeps finding two out of three.
- A provider and a leader. Many want the option to slow down or stay home.
- Emotional availability, real chemistry, shared values.
- To stop wasting time. She'll say this word for word.

What's going wrong, in her words

"They say they want something serious, then nothing."	Things fizzle at three to six months. She ends up asking "what are we?" and he's "happy where we're at."
"I attract the wrong men."	Married men, younger men, men who want her to pay or to mother them, rich men who only want something casual.
"I barely go on dates."	Three dates a year. One app, scrolled at night. Chats that never turn into a date. No friends to go out with.
"Am I too picky? Too much? Intimidating?"	Men and friends have told her she asks for a lot. She half believes it.
"My friends settled."	She won't. She'd rather be single than resent someone.

Four types you'll meet

DOING EVERYTHING RIGHT

Successful, polished, busy social life, gets asked out. Can't get the men she wants to take her seriously. Hardest to close until she owns a leak.

LOW VOLUME

Apps only, few dates, shy or no one to go out with. Usually knows she isn't putting herself out there. Easier to close.

THE GIVER

Caretaker. Cooks, cleans, carries the relationship, lets the wrong man in fast and stays too long.

STARTING OVER

Recently divorced or out of a long relationship, often with a younger man. Knows what she doesn't want and doesn't want to lose more years.

Common objections

Most objections are a symptom of skipped discovery. If she has named her problem and said she can't solve it alone, you'll hear very few. Full scripts are in the playbook. This is the short version.

SHE SAYS	WHAT IT USUALLY MEANS	YOUR MOVE
"I need to think about it."	Unsure it will work for her, or embarrassed about money.	Ask what exactly she'll think through, and what will be different tomorrow. Offer the $500 refundable deposit and book a yes-or-no call.
"It's a lot of money."	She was told $1K to $5K, so it's rarely the number. It's doubt about the result.	"Is it the money, or not being sure it'll make a difference for you?" Then let her talk.
"Can't I just be in the database?"	She still thinks access is the problem.	She can stay in it, free. Ask how many good men she has met in her life, and why one more introduction would end differently.
"I don't have time."	Usually money or doubt dressed up as a schedule.	It's one call a week plus chat, recorded. Then: "If time weren't an issue, would you do it today?"
"I bought a program before and didn't use it."	She doesn't trust herself to follow through.	Ask what got in the way. This program has a live strategy call, weekly check-ins and daily chat. It's built for accountability.
"I'll wait until I move / after the holidays."	She thinks location or timing is the leak.	Ask what's different about the new city. Waiting costs months she says she doesn't want to lose.
"Is there a guarantee?"	Fear of paying and still being single.	No one can guarantee a husband. Be honest. Talk about what 90 days does deliver, and ask whether one step closer is worth it.
"Can Nelly be my matchmaker?"	She wants the shortcut.	Nelly doesn't take female matchmaking clients. Program members get priority for introductions.

Words that work

- "Leak in the pipe." "One lever we haven't pulled." It makes the problem small and fixable, not her.
- "You're too close to it to see it."
- "Chooser, not chaser."
- "There's nothing wrong with you. It's something you're doing, and that's good news, because you can change it."
- Her own words, played back to her. "You said you're done wasting time."

House rules

HONESTY RULES

- Urgency is real or it isn't used. The on-call price is real: if she comes back tomorrow without a deposit, it's $5,000. Don't bend that.
- Never state how many spots are left unless you confirmed it today.
- No guarantees. Not of a husband, a match, an introduction or a timeline.
- Only use the claims on page 2. Don't invent numbers, features or success stories.
- Don't describe deliverables that aren't on page 2. If she asks for something extra, check with Mitch.

PAYMENT

- $3,000 total on the call: paid in full, or split into two payments that add up to $3,000.
- Never take a split that totals more or less than $3,000. Don't take $1,000 payments.
- Send the payment link while she's still on the call and stay on until it clears. Have a backup method ready if a card declines.
- $500 deposit is fully refundable and applies to the program if she joins.
- Third-party financing is coming. Don't offer it until Mitch says it's live.

Who does what

Setter	Dials and takes the 15-minute consults. Gets pain, goal, constraint and ownership. Mentions the $1K to $5K range. Books the closing call as soon as possible.
Closer	Runs the 30 to 45 minute closing call, takes payment live, onboards to Skool and books the strategy call. Right now that's Mitch.
Nelly	Delivers the program: strategy calls, weekly coaching, chat. She is the authority you point to. She is not on sales calls.

Tools

GHL	Leads, dialer, calendars, notes. Every lead tagged dating. Log every call.
Skool	Where the program lives. You send the invite on the closing call.
Slack	Team communication.

Dialing basics

Best pickup is evenings: roughly 3 to 7 pm Pacific, which is 6 to 10 pm on the East Coast. Don't call later than that. On the first pass, double dial, skip voicemail and send a text. These women are busy professionals, so call when they're off work.